Skillings' Mill Burned.

About 6.30 o'clock, last Wednesday evening, the spool mill of J. P. Skillings was discovered to be on fire. The fire originated in the boiler room. Every effort was made to save the property but the structure was so dry that the entire building was soon in flames. The men worked hard to save what they could from the mill and adjoining storehouse which was also burned. Many manufactured spools were saved, but a large quantity were burned. None of the modern and expensive machinery with which the mill was equipped, was saved. The loss will be heavy, and the insurance only $4000 on mill and machinery and $6000 on stock.

It is estimated that the loss will reach $25,000 or more, as the mill contained much machinery, quite a portion of which was new.

The mill was 140x40 feet. The output of the plant approximated 25,000 gross of spools per month, requiring the consumption of from 500,000 to 700,000 feet of white birch annually. There were four dry kilns and a dye house for coloring spools. The industry gave employment to a number of men. It is not yet known whether Mr. Skillings will rebuild.

New Year's Banquet.

One of the pleasant social gatherings of last week, was the New Year's banquet given under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. in the dining room of Garland chapel. The menu consisted of roast chicken, mashed potatoes, turnip, squash, celery, pies, coffee. Plates were laid for sixty-six. After all had eaten their fill the following toasts were responded to, Rev. C. N. Gleason acting as toast master: Church feasting and hilarity.

Obituary.

MRS. A. M. GREENLEAF.

Mrs. Adelaide Mason Greenleaf who has been critically ill at the Eye and Ear Infirmary for the past four months, died Tuesday afternoon. Her many friends will hear with deep regret and personal sorrow of the loss of her who has ever been to them an inspiration of a life of a noble and generous woman.

She was the eldest of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mason of Bethel. After completing her studies at Gould's Academy, she entered Westbrook Seminary and graduated in the literary and musical course of that well-known institution. She was a talented musician and showed marked ability at a very early age; was a pupil of Prof. Kotschmar one year after her graduation.

She was married to Levi Greenleaf, Esq., of this city, a well-known member of the Cumberland Bar, Oct. 3, 1878.

Although hers was a quiet and unassuming life, she was not unmindful of influences outside her home. In social circles her genial presence was ever welcome. She was an enthusiastic member of the Portland Festival chorus, and the Women's Literary union, being a faithful and studious member of one of its clubs.

Her church home was with the parish of the Congress Square church.

Her passing is a great affliction to her immediate family who have been within a year, called to part with a beloved and honored father, and a sister (an invalid for many years.) She drew to herself many close friends by her gentle and sympathetic nature and her loving kindness to all about her.

While her many Portland friends sympathize deeply with the bereaved husband, and sorely afflicted mother, sisters and brothers, they realize that one has gone from their own midst whose life was a bright and helpful inspiration to all those who knew her best and loved her most.

The funeral was held at the Wilde Memorial chapel in Evergreen cemetery on Thursday afternoon at eleven o'clock, services being conducted by the Rev. James F. Albion, D. D., of the Congress Square church.

A large number of the relatives and friends of Mrs. Greenleaf were in attendance to pay their last tribute of respect and love for this beautiful woman. The floral display was unusually beautiful and extensive.

The remains will rest in the tomb till May when they will be conveyed to the Mason family lot in the village cemetery at Bethel and placed beside her beloved father and sister. —Portland Press.

Frank Day of Saco says that a big robin comes to his house every morning after something to eat. There is a crab-apple tree in the rear of the house and the apples froze on the tree. Every morning the handsome bird visits the tree for a breakfast of frozen fruit. Mr. Day also feeds the robin. This is the first time that a robin has been seen in these parts in midwinter. The bird is as plump as a partridge.

During the fire which gutted the Vaughan house, Caribou, last week, one woman in an endeavor to be of some assistance entered a room opened drawers and closets and throwing the articles upon the bed wrapped the spread around them and started for the stairs. The bundle split, emptying the contents, which had to be gathered up again. On the second flight of stairs her feet slipped and she easily and quickly went to the bottom on the top of the bundle.

MYSTERY OF ST. RULE'S

By ETHEL F. HEDDLE

"My dear, we can't press things. We can't stay the march of circumstance, or be always ready for the changes of fate. We don't quite know how Bertie will behave. But as for nothing is to be done. Best on that if the piece of safe ground, Molly, as long as you have it. It is a lesson of life to take no thought for the morrow, especially when tomorrow is hidden in the Book of Fate."

"Dear—I don't believe in Fate!" She laid her hand on Eve's looking up wistfully, but the entrance of David with the lights prevented more.

"You will have all St. Rule's calling, Molly. Be prepared for that!" Eve had said after lunch. "They want all particulars, my dear—they desire to visit the scene of the catastrophe. These forms are a sort of Chambers of Horrors on a mild scale, and you know how the British matron loves her chamber of horrors! You must preserve a brave front, a 'calm sough,' as David would say. I'll try and stand between you and searching inquiry, if I can."

To which Molly could only smile, with a good deal of trepidation. When Cantyre arrived he greeted his young hostess with slight confusion, his eyes wandering at once to where Eve stood, delighting an old professor with her charming attention. Cantyre had managed to possess Miss Luttrell's hand when they were alone, though she drew it away.

"I've had an awful time of questions. Do stop here a while," he urged. "I've gone through a regular catechism, and they do get a fellow into corners. In the Hall I've forbidden the fellows to mention the word diamond. And, I say, I've sent off Smyth. He didn't half like it. He said I hadn't given him any chance, and it wasn't fair to his professional reputation. I said hang his professional reputation."

"I shall tell Molly tonight," she said. "But we must go now. Thank you very much for what you have done!"

Eve led the way determinedly back to the other room. Cantyre reluctantly, had to go, and the cousins sank down on the fur rug together to discuss the afternoon. Eve gave her tidings about the detective, and Molly clasped her hands. "I am so thankful! Oh, so thankful! Sometimes I feel inclined to write to Bertie—to tell him all that has happened—to bear what he replies. He writes such short, jerky letters! He never did write much. And of course he never mentions the diamond. Eve, could you tell Father the people have gone? There is some fresh tea here, and he has been in the laboratory since lunch. When Sandy is away he always works harder. You will put on over-shoes, Eve?"

"Not a bit! The snow is quite crisp and hard. I'll bring him, Molly." She ran through the white garden down the path, and under the white streaming branches of the laburnum, to the laboratory. Then to her surprise she heard the murmur of voices, and she paused by the door, which was slightly ajar.

"As I was saying, Professor, the race is no eye to the swift nor the battle ill the strong. I think it gangs something like that. Biblical words, I find, suit a' occasions. My grannie was dead, and she had left a' she had, just me, till a joiner I latched a sneevling, psalm-singing heepocrite! He had gane till her wi' some tale o' me drink, ing-me, as neither touches, tastes, nor handles!"

"Sandy, Sandy you should hardly speak so strongly as that!" the Professor said, turning round in mild remonstrance. "I fear you still occasionally forget yourself. I am ready to hope it is a thing of the past."

"It is, Professor—o' the lang past." He turned away, and then, as if struck by a new thought, looked round again. "About this affair o' the diamond—Sandy dearly loved a gossip, as Eve knew—has it turned up? It gauds I the public that Lord Cantyre—"

"I'll tell you about the diamond, Sandy," Eve said then, coming in and closing the door. "My uncle has not time. He is to go in to the house, and have some tea."

Forrest admired the young lady, his head on one side, his greenish-gray eyes twinkling.

"Are you coming, Uncle?" "Yes, my dear. Give me my coat, Sandy, and take off this apron. I have been up in the lath-room my dear, grinding diamonds. Where did I put my glasses? Dear me, now, where did I put them?"

He hazed round helplessly. "Are you sure, Uncle?" Eve said fidgety, "that you didn't take the diamond and grind it down for your polishing through sheer force of habit?"

Sandy laughed at that, untying the old man's canvas working-apron. The Professor was always a spectacle on his lath-room days. "Oh, that's no a bad ideal! But we'd better not mention it till David, or she'd snar nor nose off! David's temper is snar nor ever since the diamond's loss. A body would think she was suspect!"

The Professor was ready, and Eve went with him to the house. There, a sudden thought striking her, she ran upstairs, and then went back to the laboratory. Sandy was putting away some apparatus, humming a tune, but he looked round at her quickly as she entered, perceiving something in her hand, and his eyes sparkled. As much as Sandy could ever take a fancy to any person, he had taken it for the Professor's beautiful niece—he liked Molly too, very much, but he had decided Eve had even a more "taking" way. And she was "awful bonnie."

"Sandy, would you like to earn five shillings?" "I dunna say but I would. Hoo could I oblige you, Miss Luttrell?" "Can I trust you to hold your tongue?"

He nodded his head sagaciously, rubbing his hands.

"If you do," Eve began slowly, "every now and then I shall give you something. I shall know if you don't. Now, do you know a little hut on the cliffs, near the Buddo Rock, which was built by Mr. Cameron one year, for geologizing purposes?"

"I ken it fine, miss, since I helped to build it. And the other day I heard that some tinker was living there, a friend o' mine saw the smoke o' his fire. It's no a bad place, and there's heaps o' firewood lying about—driftwood and the like—"

"A man is there—a poor man—but not a tinker, and I promised to send him something. The money is in this letter, and he will write to me at once on receiving it. If you take this out to him, Sandy, I shall be your friend. But you must hold your tongue."

She had slipped the five shillings into his huge hand.

"It shall be done, miss—and on the quiet."

"You will say nothing. Only give it to him. If he is out, push it under the door."

"I understand, miss; and to the letter it shall be done."

Eve was gone then, speeding back to the house; and the letter thrust into his coat pocket. Sandy made his way through the scullery and into the kitchen. It was his only way out.

David, covering a pie at the table, looked up sourly as he passed, and he stopped, making his usual obsequious greeting.

"Hard weather, David! Hard on the pair and needy! Fine to be you, I your warm kitchen, wi' never a care I'm thinking! Nor for the next neither, I'm thinking! Eh, it maun be grand to be as sure o' heaven as you are, David! Sinners like myself are fu' o' envy o' ye."

"Thank you, Sandy!" David went on with his work, sarcastically. "Is it silken you're after, or drink? I hae neither the ane nor the ither for ye the day."

"I want neither the ane nor the ither!" Sandy drew himself up with dignity.

He chuckled grimly as he walked up the lane after that. When he got home after some purchases, he put on the kettle, and very soon Eve's envelope was steamed open. It contained a bank-note and a letter, written in French. Sandy screwed his head this way and that, under the lamp, but after spelling out the first few words, and failing to make sense of them, he put it down with disgust. Should he go with the missive? She would assuredly find out if he did not, and then all future tips would vanish. She was a clever young lady, too, and he rather liked her; and she was very bonnie! Yet, who could this man be? Bonnet! Yet, who was this man? Why should he live there? Why should she send him money secretly? "About this diamond, there was that affair o' the broken rock," Sandy cogitated, refasting the envelope, and putting on the kettle once more. "I never made that out! Somebody had a hand in that! I'd like fine to ken what! Supposing I pit the detective on a clue—on track o' the thief? Wouldna Lord Cantyre stand a tip? Wouldna the detective? I think I'll gaug and deliver the letter, and see what the man's like. I could maybe manage to get a pound or two out o' the business."

He chuckled again, and finally took a bottle from his cupboard, which he held to the light lovingly. "It's no muckle," he said to himself ruefully, "but what there is o' the best!"

Of this "best" he took a long draught, and then put it away.

"I neither touch, taste, nor handle, David," he said, addressing an imaginary listener. "Here's tae your health, my 'oman. You've given me mony a hard word. May I live tae see the day when I can dae ye an ill turn!" After which pious wish he went out and closed the door.

CHAPTER XX.

"SAY MY TRUE LOVE DID LIGHTLY ME."

Mr. Smyth, understood to be from Scotland Yard, had betaken himself and his black bag back to London, and there was no one now in the little rocky hut on the way to the Buddo Rock.

Uncle Geoff wrote that he had received Eve's "communication" by the hand of her messenger, who by the way had had the ineffable impudence to try and "pump" him—Uncle Geoff—needless to say without result. Thus far absolutely nothing had been discovered as to the thief, and here the affair seemed to rest for the present.

St. Rule's, it may be said, chafed sadly at this disappointing result. Uncle Raipin in Australia chafed, so secretly did Lord Cantyre. But he said nothing. Eve had asked him to send away the detective, and tactfully screen Bertie Luttrell, and he would do anything in the world for Eve. As for St. Rule's, though the inhabitants of the little city fumed and conjectured for a little, gradually the story of the diamond died down.

Neil Cameron came as usual to see Molly, and she was very happy. It was only now and then that it struck her that her lover had changed a good deal of late. He had never been what could have been called uproariously cheerful, but at least he had been quietly happy. She sometimes wondered if some unknown burden lay upon him—some secret care. But when she tried, very delicately and tenderly, to ask the question, he always pushed it aside almost indigantly.

"What burden should I have, Molly? I have health and strength, and—yours!" The last words came with a ring of pain. "And some day I mean to win success—to wring it from fortune's hand, if hard work can obtain it."

The reply was somehow, scarcely like Neil, but she said no more. Afterwards she told herself that she had wilfully shut her eyes—that she would not see what she might have read between the lines.

Cameron received a letter, however, one afternoon which represented the first rain-drop of the storm though its contents seemed to mean success for him and change. One of the staff of a northern university was ill, and wrote asking if he would take the work of the classes for the rest of the session—acting as locum tenens while the chief was absent in India. The remuneration was good; Cameron knew the post meant that better things must be in store in other directions. And yet his face scarcely brightened as he put the letter in his pocket and set off for the sands. It was always his favorite walk, and he had often met the two girls there in fine weather. The offer meant leaving St. Rule's—it was therefore he did not rejoice—meant losing the chance of seeing one face. How false he was! Oh, how faithless!

"I shall tell Molly that we could be married at once," he said to himself, passing down by the links and the club-house, and on to the firm yellow sands. "That would be the best way. To take her with me—then I should never think of Eve again. I need never see her. Once she was my wife I should be true to Molly, in deed as in thought. This fever would die out of my veins. This torture! It is only a matter of will. Everything is a matter of will-power. To be true to my plighted word and to forget all else. Surely my will is strong enough for that!"

He would give Molly all that she desired, all love and honor, but she was rooting something out that seemed part of his heart-strings! He told himself that after this he would never willingly think of Eve again. How distinctly he could see her face now—the sparkle of her wonderful hazel eyes, the bronze-gold waves and ripples of her hair, the white neck, the laughing lips, now mocking, now gentle, the ever-varying, ever-betraying face! What of her share in this? Did she care? Could he have won her—if he had been free? Involuntarily he groaned aloud at the thought, and his hands clenched the grass more fiercely. What if she cared! If she suffered too!

"Neil?" He had heard nothing. It was growing dark, and he had seen no one near. He started up into a sitting posture, and stared before him as if the speaker were an apparition. For a moment he could not see clearly. Molly had come down the links upon him in the clear cold February twilight. She had caught sight of him, and recognized the familiar tweed coat. She looked a little pale and startled, but she was so natural in her pretty brown costume, and hat with its plummy feathers, that Cameron regained his composure in a moment and tried to laugh.

"Molly!" he said. "You came upon me like a ghost, little girl! You startled me!"

"Did I? I am very sorry. Sit still, Neil. I want to talk to you for a moment. It is not cold."

She sat down on the bank with unusual deliberation of movement, and Cameron turned his haggard face upon her. There was something new in her voice he had never heard before—a ring of determination and decision, that was unlike anything he had ever known in her hitherto.

"I want to know, Neil," she said very quietly then, when the silence had grown rather painful, "what is the secret which you are hiding from me? There is a secret. Something makes you unhappy. And I think I have a right to know it. If I am not worthy, then I am not worthy to be your wife."

"Worthy!" broke from him passionately. "You, Molly! It is all the other way. I have never been worthy of you. But I shall try to be. Molly, I shall try! I have just heard that I can go to Aberdeen as locum tenens to Professor Masterton—'local demon' (he tried to smile), 'and this may mean that your father will give you to me at once.'"

"And the joy of the thought was so great, that you cast yourself upon the sand and groined! Neil, I think, my eyes are opened at last. I think they have been gradually opening. You are changed. You have changed to me. Is that not so? I think you must be brave now and tell me the truth. The truth is always kindest."

"I never meant to tell you." He "never meant to tell her!" She whispered slowly.

"No? But that was neither true nor brave—I thought you were both."

"Molly! I feel such a cur—such a scoundrel!"

"Do you?" she said sadly; "you should not, I suppose you could not help yourself. We hear everywhere of a 'law of change,' and this kind of thing happens frequently."

She tried to laugh a little.

"Molly!" he cried sharply. "If you would blame me, if you would accuse me, I could kill myself! Do you know, I could kill myself for causing you this suffering!"

"You will forget that," she said, turning round and speaking still in the same quiet voice. "After all it was not you—Eve would say it was Fate I suppose such things are decreed. There is nothing left to say. Why should I accuse or blame you? I do neither. We understand each other, and we can say good-bye now, and here quietly. It is better to arrange that. I shall tell my father by and by. It can come out after you are gone, in quite a matter-of-fact way. We changed our minds that was all. That is all anyone need ever know. And I think I must be going home now. Please do not come with me. Here is the ring, Neil. Do you mind if I ask you to throw it away—yonder in the waves? I should not care for you to give it to anyone else. Good-bye!" She had risen, and she held out her hand, still with the perfect self-possession. Molly had never shown him this side of her nature before; he could have cursed himself as he looked into the white stillness of her face, the emptiness of her eyes. But he could say nothing. She asked nothing. Did she know?

"Molly! Must it be good-bye?" "Only for the present. I should like you to come and see my father as usual," she said.

Then she drew her hand away, almost sharply, and turning, walked from him towards the links and the town, climbing up by the bents.

Cameron watched the little light figure standing quite still till the waves washed at her feet. He looked up then, remembering her request about the ring. It was a half-hoop of turquoise—a very inexpensive little ring—but he had always liked to see the blue against the "white wonder" of Molly's hand. He threw it away as she had requested, but it only fell a short way off, and he could see it shining on the sand, and with a kind of cry he knelt down and snatched it into his pocket. And then he too turned, and with rapid steps made for the town, where the storm, breaking at last, drove its first cold drops dashing in his face.

Free! He was free! But did freedom bring always with it such a sense of loss? Such a sense of self-complacency? She had not said one word of blame. He wished fiercely that she had.

Molly had fretted and grieved over Bertie's troubles; she faced her own very differently. When she got home that night she was just in time for dinner, and no one noticed anything wrong with the gentle little hostess. Eve did not, and the girls sat in the drawing-room as usual after dinner, Eve going to the piano to sing, as she only did for Molly when they were alone.

It was a cruel chance that made her take Blumenthal's setting of an old Scottish song—the saddest love-song ever penned—and sing it dramatically—wedding, as she always did, the soul of a true artist to the lovely voice. Nature had bestowed.

"I set my back into an alk, I thought it was a trusty tree, But first it bent and then it brak, Sae my true love did lightly me."

"Molly, darling are you asleep? Isn't it lovely? That long sighing, sobbing note. Neilson sings it, I see. What does it mean, Molly? To 'lightly' her?"

"Pass her by lightly" would be the bald translation," Molly said then slowly. "But it is something quite untranslatable. In all language, I suppose, there is something quite untranslatable." She paused a little. "This woman's love was her all—weighed above and beyond everything in her life—reached to the Beyond! His seems to have been light enough to allow him to suspect and misjudge. Oh, I think you understand, don't you? They loved—differently."

"Yes," The other girl left the piano and came up to the fire.

"But all love, speaking generally, is like that, Molly. 'One who loves, and one who permits herself or himself to be loved"—you know the French saying? And I don't know but that I should after all, prefer to be the permitting one." She laughed lightly. "Now and then there is that rare avis, an almost equal love—too often one is the inferior nature, and sooner or later the higher and nobler of the two will find that out, and then the crash has to come—the disillusionment! Of all horrible things, disillusionment is the worse. It is the bitterest tragedy in life, I think."

"Do you?" Molly rose and threw the cushions back wearily. "I think I shall go and see if the Dad is still in the laboratory. David says Sandy is back, and keeping wonderfully sober, Good-night, Eve!"

The food builds up the body, the rest restores the stomach to health. You don't have to diet yourself when taking Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. J. D. Eskine, of Allenaville, Mich., says, "I suffered Heartburn and Stomach trouble for some time. My sister-in-law has had the same trouble and was not able to eat for six weeks. She lived entirely on warm water. After taking two bottles of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure she was entirely cured. She now eats heartily and is in good health. I am glad to say Kodol gave me instant relief." When you have a cough do not try to suppress it, but remove its cause. The cough is only a symptom of some disease, and the disease is what you should cure, the cough will stop of itself. The most common cause of coughing is a cold. Anodynes will promptly suppress the cough, and preparations containing chloroform, opium, etc., are used for that purpose, but they do not cure the cold. ### PENCILINGS.

It is a pleasure to a wife when a husband takes on an air of daintiness.

There are some men whom most girls wouldn't take as a gift. When a woman is highly critical she becomes an object of distrust.

From some men religious sentiment falls with grace, and dignity.

A widow who has a fine appearance easily makes friends.

The very expressive young man often overdoes his efforts to be attractive.

A woman who only imagines she is in "society" forgets other people have some knowledge of affairs.

It requires a man's nerve to calmly take contradiction from a woman.

Some women talk as though they were doing it for pay.

Many men show strong feeling in any argument they take part.

A School for Cabmen.

A school for cabmen is to be established in Vienna, where, besides practical training in driving and harnessing, theoretical instruction will be given in the topography and history of the city. The characteristics of the chief buildings and monuments are to be taught, and students are to be instructed in "politeness and proper behavior."

Cares for the Birds.

A Connecticut woman saves string horsehair, ravelings, pieces of cotton and old lace and other odds and ends to aid the birds in building their nests. She places them in her yard where the birds can find them, and has been greatly pleased to see their eagerness and pleasure in securing furnishing goods for their homes.

Legion of Honor Medal.

The ribbon of the French Legion of Honor was recently bestowed by Admiral Duperre on a sailor who, in connection with the lifeboat service, had saved 348 lives in 35 years.

The Weather Glass.

Take a flat, broad pint flask, fill it one-third with water, and close it with a cork, through which a small bent glass tube is inserted. The glass tube should be cut so that the outer leg is as long as the bottle is high, while the inner leg (that is, the end inserted through the cork) stands out a trifle inside the neck of the bottle. To make the cork water tight use sealing wax. The illustration shows how to hang the bottle upside down by a cord. Hang in a protected place, where the sun will not penetrate.

This weather glass, similar to the barometer, indicates the pressure of the air. If the pressure of the air relaxes the water will rise in the outside tube, showing the approach of rain; if the water in the tube sinks, dry weather is to be expected.

Do Not Suppress a Cough.

When you have a cough do not try to suppress it, but remove the cause. The cough is only a symptom of some disease, and the disease is what you should cure, then the cough will stop of itself. The most common cause of coughing is a cold. Anodynes will promptly suppress the cough, and preparations containing chloroform, opium, etc., are used for that purpose, but they do not cure the cold. ## Thoughts on the International Sunday School Lessons.

(BY REV. CHARLES N. GLEASON.)
Lesson for Jan. 29, 1905.

Title, Jesus and Nicodemus. Scripture John 3:1-15.
Golden Text, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

At first the attitude of the Jewish leaders toward the Christ, was not unfriendly. They were on the outlook for the long promised Messiah and cherished the expectation of His coming. These leaders had already sent to John the Baptist asking the question "Who art Thou?", so it is not strange that early in His career Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews, should seek Jesus. Still there was naturally a difference in the way cold, unsprited churchmen, such as were most of the Pharisees who looked for an earthly triumph when the Messiah should come and were hoping for place and power under his rule, would seek him and the spirit in which one who had been listening for the coming of a spiritual teacher and leader, would approach the new Master.

We need not believe that it was through fear that Nicodemus went to Jesus by night, for indeed there was nothing to fear. Here was a new teacher. What more natural and proper then, to go to question him concerning his doctrine? Just where this conversation took place we are not told. The familiar pictures of the two seated on the flat balustraded housetop is very likely true enough; this at once the most open and secluded place in an oriental home surrounded by the night quiet, and panoplied by the glorious stars, would be the place for the discussion of high and inspiring themes and exchange of confidential discourse.

Living far away from that Eastern meeting place in distance and in time, we, too, may gather lessons from the garnered words of our Master, and this incident.

First.—Notice the impression that Jesus made on a candid mind. Nicodemus had put two and two together; there were the miracles and the teachings; one without the other might have failed to convince, but both together furnished indisputable evidence that here was a worthy teacher, sent from God. We do not rely on any single proof for our acceptance of the Gospel truth, there are the miracles and there the teachings, and there is the life of the noble Christ. We have the miracles of God on every hand and the leadings of the Divine Providence in the history of the world, past and present. Our inner consciousness craves a God and a religion, and our reason (as does the reason of the ages) admits and demands the existence of a maker and ruler of the universe and a God of providence. Put two and two together to-day, and we may say, "I believe in God," and say with Nicodemus, as we see how beautifully the Christ has revealed Him, "We know that thou art a teacher sent from God."

Second.—Sincere as this compliment to the north of the new teacher was, Jesus seems to have cut Nicodemus short. There was something more vital than the fact of even a Pharisee's belief in Him; there was the great need that men should come down from the pride of their learning and judgment of the intellect to a humble submission to God and the willingness to be taught of Him. So Jesus broke in upon the appreciative and complimentary assurance of the Pharisee with His assurance, "Ye must be born again." This idea of the new birth is really the theme of the lesson. It seemed a mystery to Nicodemus, it has been a mystery to men ever since. Yet this is not strange, for mystery is everywhere about us. What is that mysterious force in the egg, which by the brooding warmth becomes the beautiful bird? What mystery lies in the human brain, with its marvelous powers? What is life? Who can tell? The first principle of everything is mystery. Is it strange then that when the Divine touches the human soul to quicken it into a holy, spiritual life we should be confronted with mystery? It would be passing strange if it were not so

THE above picture of the man and fish is the trademark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe.

If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other fats in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

Ye must be born again, anew from above! Either of these words, would be a true translation of the Christ's utterance. This demand was made of Nicodemus who stood before Christ as a representative of the Jewish nation, a people that had been born into great religious privileges but had wandered from God and had lost their birthright. These wanderers from God must be born anew of the Holy Spirit. They needed new faith, new love, new life. Whatever we may think, theological-ly about this new birth, even though we may believe that there are those who are born into the world as Christians and grow up into the love and life of God without any change of heart; it seems as though every honest, thoughtful man must realize that having wandered from the way of God, he needs renewing. The old aimless or selfish wandering must be stopped. The feet must walk in God's way, the purpose of the life must be to honor and serve Him. To make this great change in a man's life, certainly a new force must be introduced, a new spirit be infused. It must be sought of God! It can come only from Him. It is the new birth.

Third.—Art thou a master in Israel and knowest not these things? said Jesus. One may be high in church authority, one may fill the chair in a theological seminary, one may be a leader in a religious organization, one may be a so-called pillar in the church, one may be a student and philosopher and yet know but little about spiritual truth. If we follow this fad or that, this cult or that because some or many learned men are its disciples or leaders, we shall stray all over the fields of folly, superstition and humbug. If we refuse the simple truths of the spiritual life because many of these seemingly wise ones repudiate them we shall not be wise. Why not go to the Christ for enlightenment as did Nicodemus? It is very evident from his after history that he did get just the light he needed when in the teachable spirit he came to the Divine Master for instruction.

Fourth.—"As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so must the son of man be lifted up." The uplifted Christ has been from the day of crucifixion, the great world spectacle. On that tragic day, howled at in derision by the world, in a half faith worshipped by a few, as the generations have gone by He has steadily been lifted higher and higher and the light of His life has illuminated an increasing number of human lives. Moses lifting up that serpent of brass in the wilderness, that the poisoned, tortured bodies might find relief, little thought what a lasting symbol that was to be of Him who should heal the sin-poisoned souls of millions who in the ages to come were to look unto Him and be saved.

Fifth.—"That whosoever believeth in Him, should not perish, but have eternal life." The revised version puts it this way, "That whosoever believeth, may in Him have eternal life." I think that the emphasis should be placed on the word "believe" even more than on the word "Him." The Christian is called on to believe in Christ because He is the highest and clearest revelation of God. The Jew may not be able to believe in Jesus the Christ, but looks for another; the Mohammedan, the Confucian or the follower of any other religion will not be able to believe in the Christ, perhaps, but all are called on to believe. Every man believes in a God. All men (with so few exceptions that the exceptions prove the rule) believe in a God who has something to say to them, who makes some demand upon them. Believe in God, according to your light, seek to know His will; commit yourself to Him, give Him your devotion; acknowledge His supremacy in your life. Exercise a practical belief in your God! You shall have in Him eternal life. What then, you may say is the use of sending the missionary to the heathen? Why to help him so to see God that he shall the more earnestly desire to believe in, to serve Him and to know the saving power of a spiritual religion. Let us who dwell in the full light of God's most luminous revelation, give to Him our belief. Let us commit ourselves to Him. Then shall we have in Him eternal life and His divine life shall rule in us.

A Grim Tragedy

Is daily enacted, in thousands of homes, as Death claims, in each one, another victim of Consumption or Pneumonia. But when Coughs and Colds are properly treated, the tragedy is averted. F. G. Huntley, of Oakland, Ind., writes, "My wife had the consumption, and three doctors gave her up. Finally she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which cured her, and to-day she is well and strong." It kills the germs of all diseases. One dose relieves. Guaranteed at 50c and $1.00 by all druggists. Trial bottles free. B.

Instruction at West Point.

The course of instruction at West Point is largely mathematical and professional. The principal subjects taught are mathematics, English, French, drawing, drill regulations of all arms of the service, natural and experimental philosophy, chemistry, chemical physics, mineralogy, geology, electricity, history, international, constitutional and military law, Spanish, civil and military engineering, art and science of war, and ordnance and gunnery.

A Fad of An Emperor.

One of the fads of the emperor of Russia is the collection of models. He possesses miniature reproductions of nearly every great battleship in the world, besides innumerable models of forts, guns and various weapons of destruction. A somewhat gruesome model in the collection is of a machine to prevent burial before death. It is somewhat like a guillotine and slowly drives a sharp knife into the neck of the doubtful corpse.

First Philippine War Vessel.

The gunboat Woodruff is the first war vessel built by the army in the Philippines. She was constructed under the direction of the quartermaster's Department, and Mrs. Clem, wife of Col. John L. Clem, Chief Quartermaster, christened the gunboat after Lieut. Woodruff of the army, who met his death at the hands of Moro tribesmen.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Reward for Kind Treatment.

Gregorio Zelloh, keeper of a restaurant in Oakland, Cal., taking pity upon the needs of an old Mexican, Magin Castro, gave him food and a place to sleep for a considerable time. Castro died the other day, and in his will bequeathed to Zelloh all he possessed, which proves to be a large interest in an estate in Mexico valued at several hundred thousand dollars.

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews "Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature."—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read The Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is The Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read The Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.
Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost. Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

One of the important bills of the last week was introduced by Representative Oakes of Auburn. The act provides that any sheriff, deputy sheriff or county attorney who shall willfully or corruptly refuse or neglect to perform any of the duties required by this section, shall be punished by fine not exceeding $1000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year. This act is designed to produce a better enforcement of the prohibitory law and if given a passage will be welcomed by all friends and supporters of that law.

The bill which has created the greatest sensation of the session thus far was introduced, last week by Representative Merrill of Skowhegan. It pertains to the taxation of railroads and will if it secures a passage, practically double the taxes of the railroads of the State. It is said that the additional tax which this bill would place upon the Maine Central alone would amount to $190,000 per year.

What promises to be one of the most important bills of the session has been introduced in the House by Representative Kimball of Rockland. It is understood that the bill is designed as a blow at the trading stamp industry and provides in general for the taxation of firms giving trading stamps in a manner similar to the law that is now in vogue in Massachusetts.

Representative H. H. Hastings of Bethel, has introduced an act to incorporate the Bethel Trust Co. The incorporators are Charles Chase, F. L. Edwards, D. R. Hastings, Ceylon Rowe, Edwin C. Rowe, W. O. Straw, R. Baker Thurston, M. L. Thurston, J. A. Thurston, J. A. Twaddle, E. L. Tebbetts, Silas F. Peaslee, H. H. Hastings and W. W. Hastings. The capital stock shall not be less than $25,000 or more than $200,000.

Representative M. T. O'Brien of Lewiston, has presented a resolve to repeal the constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in the State of Maine, annulling amendment five adopted Sept. 8, 1884. It is understood that resubmission will be championed by Staples in the Senate and O'Brien in the House.

An act has been presented establishing the Maine Industrial School and Shop for the Blind to be located in Portland and devoted to the industrial training of the blind, and authorizing the governor and council to accept a conveyance of a suitable lot of land from the city of Portland for the building. This was accompanied by a resolve in favor of $30,000 a year for two years, also the sum of $10,000 this year for equipping and furnishing the school and $300 annually for two years for each pupil.

One of the first Bangor bills to make its appearance was the petition of Albert W. Paine, Esq., of Bangor, praying for the enactment of a statute permitting voting by proxy for county, State and national officers. Mr. Paine has presented a similar bill biennially for some years. The petition was introduced by Mullen of Bangor.

The committee appointed by the last Legislature to consider the feasibility of establishing a home for the feeble-minded consists of Senators Morse of Waldo, Staples of Knox, Representatives Furlington of Gorham, Davis of Waterville and Ross of Bangor. The committee reports that in its opinion the time has arrived for the State of Maine to take some action to better the condition of this unfortunate class and to prevent its increase. The committee finds that of all sexes and ages there are about 2,000 in Maine who are "incapable." The committee has examined several places with a view to giving some information as to the probable expense to establish a home for feeble-minded in Maine. There are several places in the vicinity of Belfast. Among those mentioned are the Curtis farm, about two miles from Belfast, and the Otis farm just across the harbor from Belfast, as well as several places in the towns of Union and Warren in Knox county. It is a matter, however, that the committee recommends be left to a committee authorized to buy wherever a suitable amount of land and buildings can be obtained for about $10,000 to $12,000 in this State. There are two reports from the committee as to the amount of money that should be expended, Senators Morse and Staples recommending $40,000 and Representatives Davis and Ross an expenditure of $20,000, while Representative Furlington, not being present at the last meeting of the committee, did not sign either report.

EARLY APPROPRIATIONS.
The University of Maine, through George E. Thompson of Orono, asks for $12,000 a year for two years, in addition to the regular appropriation of $20,000. Bates college asks for $20,000; the Hospital of the Society of the Sisters of Charity at Lewiston asks for $5,000 a year and $10,000 for the building fund; the Bar Harbor Hospital asks $2,500 a year and $2,000 for repairs; the Bangor Children's Home requests $1,000 a year for two years, and an order passed by the House calls for a copy of the Revised Statutes, at $3.50 each, for each member of both branches.

To Buy Kennebec Arsenal.

A movement is reported to be on foot at Augusta to secure the grounds and buildings of the United States arsenal on the east side of the Kennebec river for the use of the Maine Insane hospital. The arsenal, as it is locally designated, adjoins the hospital, and is especially adapted to the needs of that institution.

The lot comprises forty acres upon which there are several buildings, barracks, storehouses, etc. The three large barracks could be converted into buildings suited to the needs of the hospital at a small expense, it is said. This would save the State the expense of erecting new buildings, which will have to be done soon to accommodate the constantly increasing demands, as it is believed that they could be secured at a moderate cost to the State. The other buildings upon the arsenal property could all be utilized by the hospital for one purpose and another.

By securing this property to the use of the hospital a much greater shore front would be secured and there would be opportunity for increasing the recreation grounds for convalescent patients; also there would be taken away any possibility of the grounds becoming devoted to uses which might prove disadvantageous to the proper caring for the insane persons of the State.

Among the direct advantages which would be secured by the acquisition would be that a road direct from the hospital to the Augusta bridge could be constructed, thereby lessening the distance from the hospital to the city proper by about a mile and a half.

It is thought that the property could be secured at a cost of about $50,000 to the State, as it is of absolutely no use to the national government under present conditions. It is hoped that Congressman Burleigh will take the matter up.—Bangor Commercial.

Economy in Time and Force.

Good roads, like good streets, make habitation along them most desirable; they economize time and force in transportation of products, reduce wear and tear on horses, harness, and vehicles, and enhance the market value of real estate. They raise the value of farm lands and farm products and tend to beautify the country through which they pass; they facilitate rural mail delivery and are a potent aid to education, religion, and sociability.

Location of Our Roads.

Many of our roads were originally laid out without any attention to general topography, and in most cases followed the settler's path from cabin to cabin, the pig trail, or ran along the boundary lines of the farms regardless of grades or direction. Most of them remain to-day where they were located years ago, and where untold labor, expense, and energy have been wasted in trying to haul over them and in endeavors to improve their deplorable condition.

ITALIANS IN LOUISIANA.

Mainly Sicilian and Neapolitan Peasants, and Are Good Workers.

The Italian immigration to New Orleans is composed mainly of Sicilian and Neapolitan peasants who have some knowledge of farming. They are in great demand for farm work, especially on the sugar plantations, where the supply is never equal to the demand. They usually leave for the plantations on the day of their landing and go to work at once.

They are better laborers than the negroes, because they are steady and do not drink. An Italian is able to do only a fraction more than the negro, but his steadier work makes him a better hand by twenty per cent, and he is rapidly crowding the negro off the sugar plantations. From the day the Italian goes to work he saves money. A small fraction, not over ten per cent, when they have made enough to support them in Italy, return to their native land.—New York Sun.

The Curious Dead Sea.

There are no fishes in the Dead Sea—no life of any kind. The percentage of solids in the water is enormous—about 26 per cent. The principal solid ingredients are the chlorides of sodium, magnesium and calcium. The deepest part of the Dead Sea's bed lies 2,600 feet below the level of the Mediterranean; its depth there is 1,310 feet. Oddly enough, it has a cloud system of its own, for one may frequently see cloud banks lying over the Dead Sea which are six or seven hundred feet below the level of the ocean.

VALUE OF COMMON FISH

They Are the Best of Food When Well Cooked.

AS TO LINES AND HOOKS

Yellow Perch and Bull-Heads—They Come in Where They Are Most Needed—The Despoiled Sucker—Take the Boys Fishing Often at Possible.

I wish to say a few words concerning the great value and usefulness of what are usually termed the "common varieties" of fish. These include the yellow perch, rock bass, bull-head, sucker, pickerel and the like. These fish though they do not command the attention of writers and fish-culturists that trout, salmon, black bass, white fish, and shad have, still hold a very important place in the fish supply of the country, and furnish pleasure and food for many thousands of people. The class of fish above referred to do not require the care and attention to make them plentiful that is necessary with the finer or game varieties. Artificial propagation is not required, and about the only thing really needed to keep a plentiful supply in the waters to which they are adapted, is to protect them while they are in their spawning-beds, and fish for them only by angling by hand with hook and line. In this way you get the greatest amount of actual enjoyment in the capture of the fish, and who is there that does not relish a mess of fish caught by himself, better than those purchased, or procured in any other way? Another point concerning these common fish, is that as a rule they are easily caught and it requires no especially fine tackle to take them, though the most successful fishermen are careful in the arrangement of their hooks and lines, and also keep their hook properly sharpened, and well-baited. A common cane pole, such as can be purchased for a small amount will be found equally as serviceable as a high-priced split bamboo jointed rod. These fish also inhabit large rivers, lakes and bays which are accessible to the millions. They are also found in the canals to which thousands resort in summer for the capture of a mess of fish. In such waters as these, the inner grades of fish cannot live and thrive. Therefore the ordinary bull-head, with his great powers of endurance, is a welcome and valuable inhabitant of this class of waters. The yellow perch with its white, flaky flesh, when properly cooked, is the equal of any common fish in the country. The Bull-Head is also a most excellent fish and I have made many good meals on the usually undervalued sucker and muller. A great many harsh things are said against the pickerel, but it is a good fish, and a suitable inhabitant for the kind of water in which it belongs. It is not a suitable companion for the trout nor is there a sufficiency of food for it in trout waters, but there is plenty in our large lakes, rivers and bays, and many a day's sport have I had picking for it. As a table-fish, they are not, in my opinion, equal to the yellow perch or bull-head but when properly prepared are very palatable. While they do not possess the game qualities of the muscalonge still in some waters I have found them to give considerable "fight" in them, and one of eight or ten pounds weight, affords both sport and an exercise of skill to land. Who has not seen a row of foot-bridges or a stream angling for suckers? And what a happy expression they bear on their faces when they trudge home with a string of them long enough to drag on the ground! Many a great man, and angler as well, has taken his first lessons in fishing from watching the slow-going fish that gains his subsistence by sucking the nutriment from the stones on the bottom of the stream. The value of our common fresh-water varieties is very great. They come in where they are most needed, and with our extensive watered area, no one need be denied the privilege of fishing, or cultivating a love for this harmless and healthful pastime. When the head of the family decides to take the little ones out fishing, and they are all gathered in the boat, each one furnished with a rod, and salmon fisherman with his rod bending under the strain of a twenty-pound salmon, enjoys with a keener delight the fun than the children, as the perch and rockbass come flopping in over the side of the boat.—A. Farmer.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

We have often urged the need, in a treeless pasture, of some shelter to afford the animals protection from the excessive heat of the sun. If this shelter be of a more permanent character with a roof and sides, it will break the force of a driving storm. The cold storms at this season are especially injurious to young animals.

Cows require care to prevent them from falling off in the quality or quantity of their milk. Bran, ground oats, flaxseed meal and cotton-seed meal are among the kinds of food that increase the quality of milk.

Pigs should be kept in growing condition and fattened early. City buyers like small pork.

Poultry.—Eat or otherwise dispose of old stock and select good layers and give them warm winter quarters, and abundant food.

Grasshoppers for the Table.
Big grasshoppers, such as grow fat and buzz loudly, in the Orient, are looked upon as table delicacies in the Philippines.

There are several methods used by the natives for catching grasshoppers. The most effective is the net. This is a large butterfly net, arranged with netting placed over a hoop, and to the latter is fixed a long handle.

The hopper is first so thoroughly dried out in the heat of the sun or in the bake oven that there is nothing left that is really objectionable, and a nice crispie article of food results. This tastes sweet of itself, and something like ginger biscuits. The natives usually sweeten the grasshopper more by using a sprinkling of brown sugar. Then the confectioners make up grasshoppers, with sugar, chocolate trimmings, and colored candies in such a way that a very nice tasting piece of confectionery is obtained. The housewife of the Philippines takes considerable delight in placing before you a nice grasshopper pie or cake.

The grasshopper pie is the most wonderful dish, as the big hoppers are prepared in such a way that they do not lose their form.

Japanese "Mother Goose."
Japanese children are accustomed to lots of toys. They have their games and nursery rhymes galore. Their "Mother Goose" is centuries older than ours; in fact, it is said that Jap mothers used to recite its jingles long before Columbus discovered America.

A favorite hero of the Japanese book is a man who rides on a frog. Long ago he was a poor robber, but gifted with remarkable dexterity as a swordsman. Once he attacked a beautiful lady, who suddenly turned into an elderly gentleman. Breaking the robber's sword into half a dozen pieces, just as if it had been a dry twig, the old man announced that he was the Ancient of all Frogs, and counseled the youth to refrain in future from stealing from the poor and to confine his attention exclusively to the wealthy.

At the same time he placed himself at the service of the young man, who, mounted on the frog's back, was able to leap across rivers and to travel at great speed on land; these superior facilities of transportation making it practicable for him to rob insurers and other avaricious persons of their treasures.

Bad Dreams

Too often seemingly trifling complaints of children are put off as things of no consequence. Every unnatural action is a symptom of disorder and deserving of careful investigation. Worms more than anything else are the cause of children's sickness. Attacking, as they do, the stomach and bowels, the effect of their presence is felt throughout the whole system and made known by nervousness, peevishness, disturbed sleep, erratic appetite, weak stomach and general lassitude.

Dr. True's Elixir

Is the surest and safest worm remedy ever compounded—but it is more than that. As a tonic and general corrective it is unrivaled. It tones stomach and bowels, cleanses and enriches the blood and sends renewed health tingling through the veins. For over 50 years the most popular home remedy. Sold at all druggists, etc. Write for free booklet on "Children and Their Diseases."

MESSAGE BY THE BLIND.

Japan Practically Has a Monopoly on This Profession.

Although Japan has practically a monopoly of blind masseurs, a few sightless professionals may be found scattered about the capitals of the world. New York has several of them, not Japanese, but the native or European product.

"It must be understood," says an instructor in massage, "that the blind of countries other than Japan have been backward about preparing themselves. Only recently have they begun to think it possible. From time to time travelers and invalids who have profited by the treatment of the Japanese in their own land have come back with tales of the wonderful benefits received, but it never occurred to them that the blind here might utilize their talents in the same way.

"At last, however, a few of the blind have come to realize their possibilities, and at a school of massage in New York a number of them have applied for instruction. Some of these applicants have finished the course, and probably are practicing in town now, either with private patients or in a sanitarium. Among the pupils I remember one woman from Brooklyn. I have kept her in mind because she was the most skillful hand at massage I ever knew. I don't see how even the Japs could beat her. Her hands were alive with magnetism. She seemed to know by instinct what set of muscles required treatment, and the ease of insomnia or rheumatism, that could hold out against her was stubborn indeed. She went west several months ago, but possibly other blind recruits, equally capable have been graduated since then to take her place."

KILLS GERMS OF CATARRH.

Hyomei Goes to the Root of the Disease and makes Astonishing Cures.

Catarrh cannot be cured by the use of pills, liquid medicines and so-called system tonics. Under such treatment the germs of the disease will still live in the air passages and increase and multiply.

Hyomei is the only scientific and thorough way to cure catarrh. Killing the germs in the air passages, it enters the blood with the oxygen, destroys the microbes in the blood and effectually drives from the system all traces of catarrhal poison.

Thousands of testimonials have been given as to the astonishing cures made by this remedy.

Mrs. Le Rendu, 76 Western Avenue Cleveland, Ohio, writes: "I believe Hyomei saved my life. I am better now than I have been in thirty years. Many doctors, both in England and France, treated me for catarrh, but I was not cured until I used Hyomei."

Probably the strongest evidence that can be offered as to the powers of Hyomei to cure catarrh is the fact that G. R. Wiley will agree to refund the money if you say Hyomei has not cured you.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1.00, consisting of an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei to last several weeks. This will effect a cure in ordinary cases, but for chronic and deep-seated cases of catarrh, longer use may be necessary, and then extra bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50c.

Couldn't Lift Ten Pounds.

Doan's Kidney Pills Brought Strength and Health to the Sufferer, Making Him Feel Twenty-Five Years Younger.

Sick kidneys cause a weak, lame or aching back, and a weak back makes a weak man. Can't be well and strong until the kidneys are cured. Treat them with Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's the testimony of one man cured.

J. B. CORTON.

I could have raised ten pounds of weight from the ground, the pain was so severe. This was my condition when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly relieved me and now I am never troubled as I was. My back is strong and I can walk or ride a long distance and feel just as strong as I did twenty-five years ago. I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have given a supply of the remedy to some of my neighbors and they have also found good results. If you can sift anything from this rambling note that will be of any service to you, or to any one suffering from kidney trouble, you are at liberty to do so.

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Corton will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address: Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.

Dr. Baker's Old Clock.

The Portland Express publishes the following from Dr. Smith Baker:

The old eight-day clock with its mahogany and birds-eye-maple cases, its brass ornaments, its large white face, with hour hand, minute and second hand, its picture of the moon, keeping time with the moon in the sky, its heavy weights—its slow swinging pendulum, its loud sounding bell making more noise than music!

Grandfather bought it 115 years ago, and when he died in 1820 it became father's, and when he died in 1870 it became our elder brother's, and when he died in 1896 it became his son's and now that his son has passed away, it has returned to the youngest and last of father's family. It is 50 years older than any of grandfather's descendants. Grandfather's father, who died in 1797 heard it strike and six generations have followed since then. Had it memory and could speak what stories it could tell of what it heard as it stood in the sitting room of the old two-story house, half way on the stage road between Augusta and Brunswick, in the days before the railroad came, when the coach called to change horses and the passengers came in for dinner and warmed themselves by the old fashioned open fire, and its blaze lit up the face of the clock while the men told their stories and repeated the latest news.

The latest news came by stage then, there were no railroads or telegraphs or daily papers and it was two or three days after a thing had occurred in Boston before it was known on the Kennebec. It saw or was seen by men as they discussed politics for those old men were politicians and debated before the open fire the questions which were before Congress. It heard them talk about Washington's death and discuss Napoleon's battles.

It heard grandfather tell about the Great and General Court of Massachusetts, of which he was a member from the district of Maine, quite 100 years ago. What incidents it could relate of the judges, ministers and other public men of the long ago who used to call to rest awhile and for dinner.

Governors Lincoln, Dunlap, Kent and Hubbard heard it strike. Judges Weston, Shepley, Tenney, Emmons, Rice and May were reminded by it when they should proceed. It kept time for Father Jotham Sewall, John Sawyer, John Caruthers, Dr. E. Gillett, Dr. Benjamin Tappan, Dr. J. W. Chickering, Dr. David Thurston and Father J. T. Hawes, all to lead in prayer, and some of them were not very brief in their devotions. If it could only remember and speak what descriptions it could give of social life one century ago; how people dressed and what they talked about. It has watched a great many young people into the hours of midnight as they told over and over the old, old story of human love, but it tells no secrets.

It has ticked out the long seconds of anxiety when children were born, and broken the silence in hours of sadness when death came. What a book it could write, not of anything very wonderful, only as all common lives are, after all, full of the wonderful. The old clock itself has never done any one great thing, but its bell has struck at least 5,820,290 times and it has ticked at least 2,110,584,000 times, all one at a time. It is not so costly, or elaborate, or ornamental as those made nowadays but it is a memorial of the past, connecting seven generations, and each tick speaks of loved ones, of childhood's days and brings up sweet memories which grow surer as the years pass away. Dear old relic! God pity the man to whom such a memento becomes rubbish, he deserves no posterity to remember him. Dear old clock! Let its pendulum swing for another century and its bell ring to unborn generations, and may those for whom it shall keep time in the future be as worthy as those for whom it kept time one hundred years ago.

Found a Cure for Indigestion.

I use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for indigestion and find that they suit my case better than any dyspepsia remedy I have ever tried and I have used many different remedies. ### A Brave Girl.

Miss Bertha B. Fuller of Springfield Mass., deserves honorable mention if not the Carnegie medal for heroism. She is an assistant of the city clerk and with hundreds of others she got caught by the sudden outbreak of fire in the City hall a few weeks ago. Obeying the first impulse and the natural instinct of self-preservation, she started to escape, when she recollected that in the office and exposed to destruction were official books and documents of great value which could not be replaced. The flames had already made such progress and the smoke was so stifling that to return was dangerous, but the brave girl returned, seized the documents, placed them in the fire-proof vault and closed and locked the door. Then she succumbed and sank to the floor unconscious and would have perished had not the police rushed to the rescue and carried her to a place of safety. It was a rare exhibition of courage and presence of mind, and to its faithful custodian the city owes the preservation of valuable documents.—Ex.

A Horse's Self-Sacrifice.

When Big Joe, the high horse on engine No. 76, reared and plunged to one side in crossing Amsterdam avenue in order to avoid trampling on three children who were skurrying through the street, he did the sort of thing that horses have been doing ever since they were bent and broke to men's service. Joe "seemed to realize that the children would be trampled" if he went on, the firemen said. "Seemed to realize" is a phrase that insults the horse's instinct. He does realize in such a situation.

When a baby creeps into a good horse's stall, what is it that makes the animal stand trembling upon two feet and crowd against the side of the stall in his determination not to touch the child? Is it not a complete, though perhaps not a reasoned realization that his weight may crush and terribly harm the child?

Big Joe's heavy plunge to one side carried the noble horse to his own death. The pavement was slippery with snow, and the movement caused the horse to slip and fall, so that he was carried against under and an approaching trolley car. Wedged beneath the wheels of the car, the horse who had valued the safety of the street children far above his own, was shot to end his suffering.—New York Mail.

Bought Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and Sent it to Friends.

Mr. F. W. J. Fletcher, a druggist in Victoria, Australia, says: "A customer of mine, was so pleased with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which she had used for her children when suffering from colds and croup, that during a fortnight's time, she obtained at my shop, nine bottles, which she sent to her friends in different parts of the State, telling them how much good it had done and advising them to give it a trial."

Circumstantial Evidence.

"Several years ago I took a late train from Boston to New York," said a man in business in Kansas City. "In the morning I was awakened earlier than usual by the porter who said that a robbery had been committed on the sleeper during the night and that all the passengers would have to get up. Some one had taken six one hundred dollar bills from the clothing of a gentleman who occupied a berth in the middle of the car. Every section had been taken before he left Boston and as the train had been almost constantly in motion it seemed certain that the person who had committed the theft was still on the car."

"The porter said no one had been aboard but the passengers, and that none of them had left. It was proposed to search everybody. A man who had a berth directly opposite from the one who had been robbed objected. He told his name and said any one might easily find that he was a man of good reputation. In the meantime some officers boarded the car and after a little swearing got the money from the colored porter who was the guilty one."

"Then the passenger who had refused to be searched asked the officers to examine his pockets. This seemed strange, but he insisted.

In an inside pocket they found six one hundred dollar bills. It was merely a coincidence that he should have the same amount of money as the other passenger had lost; and in exactly the same denominations, but he knew that under the circumstances he could hardly establish his innocence. How was that for a case of circumstantial evidence?"—Nashville American.

Bulls Made in Speaking.

Numerous specimens of Irish bulls and other bulls are given in Pearsons Magazine. For example, an orator, declaiming against landlords and capitalists, wound up with the following words: "If these men were landed on an uninhabited island, they wouldn't be there half an hour before they would have their hands in the pockets of the naked savages!"

In the British parliament not long ago a member said in debate: "All I ask, Mr. Speaker, is that to my plain question, 'When will the correspondence be published?' I should have a plain answer 'yes' or 'no.'"

A professor of chemistry, in lecturing to his class, announced: "One drop of this poison placed on the tongue of a cat would be sufficient to kill the strongest man."

Eloquently assailing a taxation scheme a public speaker declared: "They'll keep cutting the wool off the sheep that lays the golden eggs until they pump it dry."

When selling goods to a customer one day, a Dublin shopkeeper said: "It will last you forever, madam, and make you a petticoat afterward."

A speaker said in a public address: "All along the untrodden paths of the future we can see the hidden footprints of an unseen hand!"

This is one from a preacher: "We pursue the shadow, the bubble bursts, and leaves the ashes in our hands."

French Academy Founded in 1635.

The French academy is one of the five academies, and the most eminent, constituting the institute of France. It was founded in 1635 by Cardinal Richelieu, and reorganized in 1816. It is composed of 40 members, the new member being elected by the remaining 39 members for life, after personal application and the submission of their nomination to the head of the state. It meets twice weekly at the palace Mazarin, 23 Quai Conti, Paris, and is "the highest authority on everything appertaining to the niceties of the French language, to grammar, rhetoric and poetry, and the publication of the French classics." The chief officer is the secretary, who has a life tenure of his position. A chair in the academy is the highest ambition of most literary Frenchmen.

A Million Dollars a Mile. One million dollars a mile is the estimated cost of constructing a tunnel four miles in length on the line of the new Moffatt railroad, from Denver, Co., to Salt Lake City, Utah. Contractors hesitate about bidding for the work because of the hardness of the granite through which the tunnel must be bored. Sticks of dynamite make little impression on the rock and the railroad company may have to build the tunnel.

The Police Are All Mexican. In Laredo, Tex., a town of several thousand inhabitants, fully half the population are Mexicans.

For many years the mayor and part of the city council have been Mexicans. At a recent election the mayor and all the aldermen elected were Mexicans.

In their recent appointments they have put in an entirely new set of policemen and an assistant city marshal, none of whom can speak the English language.—New York Herald.

Money in Tam O' Shanter's.

The increased popularity of the knitted tam o' shanter hats with the fair sex this season, has brought about an extensive demand that is taxing the productive capacity of English manufacturers to the full.

Dyers, too, are benefiting by the taste for vivid colors in this piquant headgear. The revived popularity has led Nottingham hosiery makers to put in extra machinery for its production. Heretofore they have given it little attention, though it is said to be a very profitable product.

THE HOME.

An Anti-Worry Recipe.

Do you wish a recipe for preventing a worry, For giving composure, and freedom from flurry? Just remember one fact which is true, you will find— When anything happens to ruffle your mind, Just something or nothing there is to be done, Just nothing or something, that's clear as the sun. If something, then do it and make no delay, If nothing, all thoughts of it cast far away. This simplest of rules, if you'll only obey, Will free you from wrinkles for many a day. —Delia L. Porter.

Rest and Recreation.

Along the line of justifiable extravagance let me make a plea for more recreation for the busy housewife. In caring for her home and loved ones she is apt to forget the duty she owes herself, and almost before she is aware of the fact she is growing nervous, feels discouraged and irritable. At such a time let her pause and consider not how much she will save by continuing in the same routine but how much she will gain by laying aside her work for a time, that she may rest and recuperate. Do not wait until Nature calls a halt, but make a practice of taking one or two vacations every year—going where you can really rest, and have time to think not of the work you have left behind (that will care for itself), but of the benefit yourself and loved ones will gain. The short separations "make the heart grow fonder," and the dear ones will also learn from your absence how necessary you are to them. Time and money spent more freely this way will "really pay in the end." It will mean better health for wife and mother, a larger bank-account, and happier homes.—January Woman's Home Companion.

Cheerfulness at Meals.

Many people must have been struck by the utter absence of interesting conversation that is so marked a feature of modern meals. The olden days all the wit and brightness of the day seemed to be focused into the breakfast and dinner hour, and nearly all the celebrated stories of brilliant repartee that have come down to us were delivered during meal. But nowadays people turn their worries and bothers at the table, look up trains and read papers during breakfast, and if they have anything disagreeable to say to another member of the family, very ten choose meal time in which to say it, says the Indianapolis News. Somebody once suggested that children should be trained to be bright and cheerful during meals just as much as they are trained to eat properly, for the one habit, like the other, would cling to them when they grow up, and make them much sought after companions. Worry is very bad for digestion and so is the other fashion of seeing how fast you can get through your breakfast or lunch. Certainly both things react upon one's neighborhood enjoyment of the hours that should bring relaxation and good humor.

Repose.

Repose is one of those elements of success which no woman can afford to be without. And there are those who even consider it an essential.

Lack of repose is a distressing thing which annoys everybody. The twitching muscles, the anxious, roving eyes, the busy fingers, the nervous mouth; all these mark a woman who has never learned the lesson of rest.

They say that repose is learned in early girlhood and that the woman who have not acquired it at the age of eighteen will never know it at all. Certainly it is a thing which cannot be studied too young, for it is a quality which carries with it a great deal that is pleasant. With repose you have learned one of the most valuable lessons of life.

If you want to study repose learn these things:

How to keep your hands quiet. How to do nothing at all with your fingers. How to let the arms rest at ease.

THE HOME.

An Anti-Worry Recipe.

Do you wish a recipe for preventing all worry, for giving composure, and freedom from hurry? Just remember one fact which is true, you will find—

When anything happens to ruffle your mind, just something or nothing there is to be done, just nothing or something, that's clear as the sun.

If something, then do it and make no delay. If nothing, all thoughts of it cast far away. This simplest of rules, if you'll only obey, will free you from wrinkles for many a day.

—Delia L. Porter.

Rest and Recreation.

Along the line of justifiable extravagance let me make a plea for more recreation for the busy housewife. In caring for her home and loved ones she is apt to forget the duty she owes herself, and almost before she is aware of the fact she is growing nervous, feels discouraged and irritable. At such a time let her pause and consider not how much she will save by continuing in the same rut but how much she will gain by laying aside her work for a time, that she may rest and recuperate. Do not wait until Nature calls a halt but make a practice of taking one or two vacations every year—going where you can really rest, and have time to think not of the work you have left behind (that will care for itself), but of the benefit yourself and loved ones will gain. These short separations "make the heart grow fonder," and the dear ones will also learn from your absence how necessary you are to them. Time and money spent more freely this way will "really pay in the end." It will mean better health for wife and mother, a larger bank-account and happier homes.—January Woman's Home Companion.

Cheerfulness at Meals.

Many people must have been struck by the utter absence of interesting conversation that is so marked a feature of modern meals. In the olden days all the wit and brightness of the day seemed to be focused into the breakfast and dinner hours, and nearly all the celebrated stories of brilliant repartee that have come down to us were delivered during a meal. But nowadays people talk their worries and bothers at the table, look up trains and read papers during breakfast, and if they have got anything disagreeable to say to another member of the family, very often choose meal time in which to say it, says the Indianapolis News.

Somewhere once suggested that children should be trained to be bright and cheerful during meals, just as much as they are trained to eat properly, for the one habit, like the other, would cling to them when they grow up, and make them much sought after companions.

Worry is very bad for digestion, and so is the other fashion of seeing how fast you can get through your breakfast or lunch. Certainly both things react upon one's neighbor's enjoyment of the hours that should bring relaxation and good humor.

Repose.

Repose is one of those elements of success which no woman can afford to be without. And there are those who even consider it an essential.

Lack of repose is a distressing thing which annoys everybody. The twitching muscles, the anxious, roving eyes, the busy fingers, the nervous mouth; all these mark the woman who has never learned the lesson of rest.

They say that repose is learned in early girlhood and that the women who have not acquired it at the age of eighteen will never know it at all. Certainly it is a thing which cannot be studied too young, for it is a quality which carries with it a great deal that is pleasant. With repose you have learned one of the most valuable lessons of life.

If you want to study repose learn these things:

How to keep your hands quiet.
How to do nothing at all with your fingers.
How to let the arms rest at ease in the lap.

How to acquire the art of concentration.

How to rest the muscles.
You must go to work every day and practice these things.
Practice thinking of only one thing at a time.
Practice pleasant thoughts.
Don't move your mouth aimlessly.
Never compress the lips or twitch them.—Exchange.

One's Appearance.

Replying to the inquiry as to what food produces fat and what does not, the effects of various foods upon different individuals vary with the occupations and other conditions of life, and especially are influenced by the peculiar characteristics of people. No two are alike in their expenditure of muscular and nervous energy, so no two will need the same amount or kind of nutriment to repair the waste.

A brain worker of sedentary habits would find as much nutriment in a meal of fish and a biscuit as a field laborer would find in a big dinner of pork and cabbage.

In general, though, fat is produced by such foods as bacon, fat beef, mutton, rich milk, cream, all starchy vegetables, as potatoes, beans, rice, grains, butter, olive oil, cod liver oil, sugar, in form of candy or sweetened drinks, bread and butter and rich gravies, fat pork—in fact, it may be summed up in fat meats, sugar, starchy vegetables, and grains.

Drinking water copiously with meals will induce fat in some persons.

Little exercise, long sleeping hours, freedom from worry and laughing are some of the helps toward getting fleshy.

A diet of lean meat will make the average person thin. This is a favorite method of athletics in training.

Fruits, acids and green salads, grapes, apples, lemons, carrots, lettuce, dandelions, spinach, fish, oysters, and the white of albumen of the egg, venison, game, veal, are the foods for those who do not wish to attain flesh.

Going without breakfast, eating only one heavy meal a day and avoiding rich soups, cream, fat meats, and starchy vegetables and cereals seems to be the proper way of reducing one's flesh.—Ex.

Look Into Your Attic.

Hundreds of little feet are cold today. Hundreds of little hands are swollen and red. Hundreds of half-clad bodies are shivering.

How much warmth is there stored away in your attic? What have you there? How many pairs of half-worn boots? How many stockings, coats you would not patch, hoods that are off style, mittens that are outgrown? You put them away a year ago, and thought they could be worn again this winter.

That old coat, is good for something and for some one now. As it hangs, it is of no worth to you or to your child. Why not, take it off the hook and send it to one of these shivering little ones?

Do not say you do not know to whom to give it or where to send it. Write to the pastor of any city church and he will put you in touch with those who will gladly place these things where they will do the most good. Don't wait, but look over your surplus to-day.

All these worn clothes are useless to you; they mean health and life to the child of the street.

Ask your neighbors to help swell the amount of prospective comfort, and encourage them to empty their attics and relieve these needs of suffering ones.

Sickening Shivering Fits

of Ague and Malaria, can be relieved and cured with Electric Bitters. This is a pure, tonic medicine; of especial benefit in malaria, for it exerts a true curative influence on the disease, driving it entirely out of the system. It is much to be preferred to Quinine, having none of this drug's bad after-effects. E. S. Munday, of Henrietta, Tex., writes: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice, till he took Electric Bitters, which saved his life. At all druggists; price 50c, guaranteed."

WOMEN'S NEGLECT

SUFFERING THE SURE PENALTY

Health Thus Lost Is Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many women do you know who are perfectly well and strong? We hear every day the same story over and over again. "I do not feel well; I am so tired all the time!"

Miss Kate McDonald

More than likely you speak the same words yourself, and no doubt you feel far from well. The cause may be easily traced to some derangement of the female organs which manifests itself in depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere or do anything, backache, bearing-down pains, flatulency, nervousness, sleeplessness, leucorrhoea. These symptoms are but warnings that there is danger ahead, and unless headed a life of suffering or a serious operation is the inevitable result.

The never-failing remedy for all these symptoms is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss Kate McDonald, of Woodbridge, N. J., writes:

"I think that a woman naturally dislikes to make her troubles known to the public, but restored health has meant so much to me that I cannot help from telling mine for the sake of other suffering women."

"For a long time I suffered untold agony with a uterine trouble and irregularities, which made me a physical wreck, and no one thought I would recover, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me, and made me well and strong, and I feel it my duty to tell other suffering women what a splendid medicine it is."

If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free and always helpful.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

In icy times all kinds of stock are in some danger. Horses should be sharp shod, and the cowpats should be the stables and water troughs should be lightly strawed, so that the cows need not slip.

Farm horses are harder for not being blanketed and for having a heavy coat of hair, for their work seldom causes them to sweat; but carriage and road horses should be well blanketed, so that their coats may be light, and that when wet with sweat they will dry without chilling the animal.

Milch cows, of course, need to be well fed to keep up the flow of milk. The use of roots, steamed feed and ensilage reduces the quantity of water they will drink. Water that has had the chill taken off, say at a temperature of fifty degrees or higher, may be drunk in any quantity without injury.

Sheep, of all stock on the farm, are profitable as manure makers in winter. Their sheds and yards should be well strawed, but they should have light platforms here and there in them for the sheep to stand upon and cool their feet. Old doors do very well, frequently turned over.

Swine Notes.

The any-sort-of-care swine raiser usually produces a very indifferent sort of hogs.

Dirt not only will not produce flesh, but will neutralize much of the value of the food consumed by hogs.

Why do feeders provide clean troughs and boxes for their fattening steers, while they throw the hog feed down in the mud? Who will answer?

The any sort-of-care swine raiser is probably related to the man who believes that the fellow who falls at everything else can succeed at farming—and they both raise hazy-splitter hogs.—Ruralist.

Look for Drafts.

It is a mistake to make open, drafty chicken-houses. If you are going to let them roost out of doors let them have a tree, but a chicken-house made of racks is a fine thing to give the chickens colds. Ventilation and cold, chilly drafts are two very different things.

Didn't Like 'Em.

He—"Are you in this anti-spitting crusade?"
She—"Indeed, I am! I'd like to see every spitter in the country annihilated!"

Tonic to the System.

For liver troubles and constipation there is nothing better than DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little Pills. They do not weaken the stomach. Their action upon the system is mild, pleasant and harmless. Bob Moore, of Lafayette, Ind., says, "No use talking, DeWitt's Little Early Risers do their work. All other pills I have used gripe and make me sick in the stomach and never cured me. DeWitt's Little Early Risers proved to be the long sought relief. They are simply perfect." Persons traveling find Little Early Risers the most reliable remedy to carry with them. Sold by G. R. Wiley. D. W.

GEMS IN VERSE.

Live where the joys are, and, scornin defeat,
Have a good morrow for all whom you meet.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

And he spake: "It is only sorrow
And sin and folly that dies;
Whatever was good in the Old Year
In the soul of the New Year lies.
As you stand on the grave of error,
Look up, for the stars are true!
Let go of the things departed—
Reach out for the things that are new!"

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts
not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives,
Who, thinks most, feels the noblest, acts
the best.
And he whose heart beats quickest lives
the longest:
Lives in one hour more than in years do some Whose fat blood sleeps as it slips along their veins.
Life is but a means unto an end; that end,
Beginning, mean, and end to all things,—
God.

—From "Festus,"—P. J. Bayley.

At the Tick of the Clock.

Every minute, every minute
Has the whole of living in it.
Some one's crying,
Some one's born,
Some one's dying,
Old and worn,
Some one's laughing,
Some one's fed,
Some one's chafing,
Some one's dead,
Some one's hearing
Love confessed
Some one's jeering
Some one's jest,
Some one's sorry,
Some one's glad,
Some one's worry
Drives him mad.
Every minute, every minute
Has the whole of living in it.
—Tom Hall.

Unfinished Still.

A baby's boot and skein of wool,
Faded, and soiled, and soft;
Odd things, you say, and no doubt you're right,

Round a seaman's neck this stormy night,
Up in the yards aloft.

Most like it's folly, but mate, look here;
When I first went to sea,
A woman stood on the far-off strand,
With a wedding ring on her small, soft hand
Which clung so close to me.

My wife, God bless her! the day before
She sat beside my foot,
And the sunlight kissed her yellow hair,
And the dainty fingers deft and fair,
Knitted a baby's boot!

The voyage was over, I came ashore;
What think you, found I there?
A grave the daisies had sprinkled white,
A cottage empty, and dark as night,
And this beside the chair.

The little boot, 'twas unfinished still!
The tangled skein lay near,
But the knitter had gone away to rest
With the babe to sleep on her quiet breast,
Down in the churchyard drear.

Billy and I.

They say they are going to shoot you, Old Billy,
Billy, but don't you fret,
For the fellow who dares to meddle with you must reckon with me, you bet;

You're a poor old horse, Old Billy, and you aren't worth much, it is true,
But you've been a faithful friend to me, and I'll see you safely through.

Shoot Old Billy? I guess not, though you may be old and gray,
By the self-same stretch of mercy they'll be shooting me some day;

I haven't much love for the fellows who follow the shooting plan;
If they had more pity for horses and dogs they'd have more love for a man.

That's right, Old Billy, I like it—your muzzle against my face;
We've had rattling times together, and once we won the race—

Do you remember it, Billy, the dude that we downed that day?
And the way he swore that an old farm horse should show his trotter the way!

Well, Billy, we're both great sinners, for we've both grown old, you know;
And we've only a little further down the road to go;

So we'll fare along together till the Master
calls us home
To the happy Home Land stables and our feet forget to roam.

They tell us that horses have no souls, and they all declare it true;
That shows how little they know, Old Boy,
and it proves they don't know you;

Well, well, 'tis a mighty question, and quite beyond my ken—
But the more I know of horses like you the less I brag about men.

You've been a good horse, Old Fellow,
steady and brave and true;
You have given us faithful service—done
all that a horse could do;

You have earned your keep; you shall have it, so live as long as you can—
For justice is justice, and right is right whether it's a horse or a man.
—Boston Transcript.

THE PERFECT CITY.

Berlin a Marvel of Civic Government.

When Micromegas, the giant phlogopher from Sirius, visited the earth, riding down on a comet, he landed, on the shore of the Baltic Sea, directly north of Berlin. He was, as you know, 120,000 in height, and when conversing with the German savants seated then upon his thumb-nail, Berlin was a that time, as it is now, the perfection of cities. A writer says of it, "It is to-day a marvel of civic administration, the most modern and the most perfectly organized city that there is. If one wanted to show some visitor from another sphere, or some distinguished revenant from the past the most complete embodiment of modern ideas in the way of civilization, one must take him to Berlin."

To Obtain Silence.

Herbert Spencer used in his later years to pay visits to Grant Allen, the writer. On one occasion he went provided with two curious objects tied behind his ears. These excited the curiosity of the company. Their purpose was soon disclosed, for whenever the conversation took a turn which did not interest him the distinguished visitor pulled the things over his ears, and so obtained silence within himself. He called them ear clips.

SELECTIONS.

When a woman is all dressed up it's her figure, when she isn't at all, just shape.

There is something awfully exasperating about the comfortable way a fat girl can sit on a hard wooden bench.

The hardest thing is to convince your wife that you wouldn't like to go to church if you weren't a drinking man.

When a girl is afraid a hammock will break down with her alone it's funny what a lot more confidence she has in it sitting in it with a man.

Diamond Speculation.

A young New York broker, whose father has dropped two fortunes in Wall street, about a year ago fell heir to $30,000 from the estate of an aunt. He at once employed an expert and purchased at pawn brokers' sales and elsewhere diamonds that took his whole fortune. The other day he sold the whole lot at an advance of $9,000.

Silver Ore for Ballast.

The rails of the Mexican Gulf Railway are laid on mahogany sleepers and the bridges built of white marble. In West Mexico is a line with ebony sleepers, and ballast of silver ore drawn from old mines beside the track. The engineers constructing these railways had no other material on the route, and found it cheaper to use these seeming extravaganzas than to import the ordinary material.—Ex.

Postmaster's Long Service.

Henry Bartling has served as postmaster of Addison, a village in Du Page county, Ill., 24 miles west of Chicago, for 50 years continuously. He was originally appointed by President Franklin Pierce, and began service May 3, 1854. He is now 78 years of age. Few postmasters in the country have served longer than he.

An Ancient Manuscript.

The only manuscript of "Beowulf," the great Anglo-Saxon epic, now extant, is the one from the collection of Sir Robert Cotton, now in the British museum. The poem dates from the middle of the eighth century, and the single existing manuscript is badly charred by a fire through which it passed in 1731.

Cat Raises Chickens.

Southwest Harbor, Me., reports a cat which has deserted a promising family of four kittens to adopt a brood of chickens, from which she refuses to be separated and which she shows no signs of considering in light of food.

Lofty Botanical Gardens.

On the summits of the Rigi and Pilatus Alpine gardens are to be maintained hereafter for the purpose of botanic study and for the preservation and propagation of rare Swiss plants.

The Warm Reindeer Skin.

The skin of the reindeer is so impervious to the cold that anyone clothed in such a dress, with the addition of a robe of the same material, may bear the intense cold of an Arctic winter's night.

French Single Rail System.

Experiments are now being conducted near Paris with a single-rail system. It is proposed that such a railroad be built between Paris and Marseilles, which would only be used for carrying the mails, newspapers and small packages.

Cotton at 2 Cents a Pound.

The people of Lagos and Abeokuto, West Africa, all of whose cotton the British Government has agreed to take for the next three years, are to get 2 cents a pound for their crops.

To Mark First Settlement.

An eight-ton block of granite will be used to mark the site of the first settlement of Derby, Conn., on Acadamy Hill.

The Sun's Power.

The illuminating power of the sun at zenith is estimated by Mr. Charles Feby at 100,000 candles.

FEEDING THE HORSE.

Proper Judgment is of Great Importance.

In caring for the horses the question of proper feeding is all important. The care given the horse along other lines may be done exactly right, but the feeding may not be given proper judgment. Too many farmers do not feed their horses sufficiently heavy, while on the other hand there are those who overdo the matter. The mistake in the light feeding of horses applies especially to the horses that are expected to do heavy farm work only, although many of these same horses are obliged to do not only farm work, but road work besides. If we consult the statistics of some of the large cities in reference to this matter, we will find that horses there are much better fed as a rule than those on the farm. To illustrate this point: the average road horse in the city, or the street car horses, that are drawing cabs and loads of about similar weight are fed from 4 to 15 pounds of oats and 10 to 12 pounds of hay daily, and where corn is a part of the ration the proportions are about 15 pounds of corn, 10 pounds of oats and 15 pounds of hay. In the feeding of the dry horse, whose work is more nearly like that of the farm horse, the ration is at least one-half more than what it is for horses doing lighter work. Let us stop and compare for a moment these rations with those fed by the average farmer. With the farmers, in too many cases, the ration for grain is corn and corn stover for roughage, and if corn stover is not used for roughage, a poor quality of hay is often employed. It is not to be wondered at, then, that many farm horses quickly wear out when spring work begins. The farmer should be prepared to feed oats as a part of the regular ration throughout the year. If at all possible, especially in this time when heavy work is being done, he should aim to feed for the work which the animals are expected to do, and bear in mind that where horses are employed to do farm work and go on the road besides, great care should be exercised in feeding properly.

Some Facts About Mad Dogs.
Rabies is much like other diseases in that it does not always manifest itself by the same chain of symptoms. For example, a dog suffering with this disease is by no means always mad and furious. Flemming has well said that it is a great and dangerous error to suppose that the disease commences with signs of madness and that the earliest phase of the malady is ushered in with fury and destruction. The symptoms appear very gradually, and at first one would hardly suspect brain disease.

Difficulty in swallowing is an early symptom and frequently leads the owner to suppose that the dog has a bone in its throat.

Dr. Salmon says: "A dog which appears to have a bone in its throat is, on general principles, one of the most dangerous animals in existence. The supposed bone may be there, but on the other hand the symptoms which lead to this supposition may be due to partial paralysis caused by rabies, and the owner may be inoculated with the virulent saliva while thrusting his finger or hand into the dog's mouth to discover which has no existence but in his imagination."

It is commonly believed that animals suffering with this disease do not drink water (hence the name hydrophobia, dread of water), which is a mistake. They have no fear or dread of water, but continue to drink as long as they live and the fact that a suspected dog is seen to drink or wade in water is no proof that he is not mad.

The dumb form of rabies is very common, and many persons know it as "droppaw" who have no idea of its true nature, and yet should one of these dogs bite a person or some of the saliva get into a wound on the hand or elsewhere, it could produce the disease and death with all its horrors.

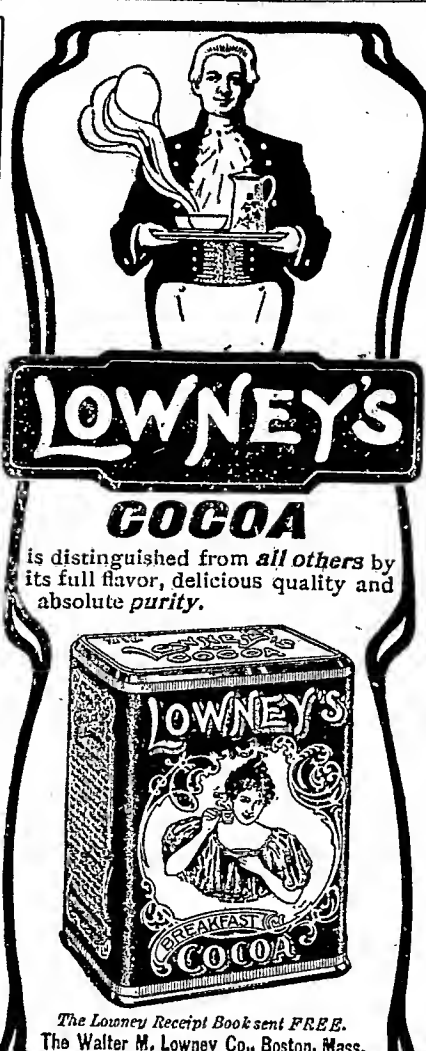

There is an erroneous and rather stupid belief that if a dog bites a person and afterward contracts the disease that the person bitten will also go mad, but there is no ground for it whatever, and in this connection I would most earnestly suggest that when a person is bitten by a dog that it is bad policy to have the dog killed. Confine him, and if he has rabies, he will die in a few days, but if he does not die, the person may know that he or she is safe. If, on the other hand, he does die, no time should be lost in consulting a physician, if indeed one has not already been consulted. I would also suggest here that it would be well to place the cadaver on ice and preserve it, as your physician may wish to use it for inoculation purposes, in order to prove the nature of the disease.—Ranch and Range.

LIVE STOCK ITEMS.

Pure water and a variety of wholesome food regularly given, with comfortable shelter and kind treatment, are the best preventives of disease.

Hogs, like sheep, will get along with a comparatively small amount of water, but it must be clean and arranged so they cannot wallow in it. Some of the patent hog watering troughs are excellent.

What is said about keeping animals warm during the winter, does not apply to manure. Smoking is more injurious to the compost than to boys.

POINTERS.

It never is a waste of time to take time to do a thing well.

Gloomy reflections are most likely to come with self-imposed idleness. To look on the bright side of life robs the shadow of its sombre outlines.

Pleasant words have the ring of healthful utterances. It is easy to reform a bad habit when the effort really is honest.

To put off doing a good turn means a desire not to do it.

When the future seems the most promising the danger of disaster may be closest.

A sudden fit of anger may have an influence in many directions. There are times when even kindness has a depressing effect.

Power to reason well sometimes is only the force of habit.

TRICKS TO AVOID SERVICE.

Many Amusing Incidents When the Russian Tries to Play Them.

The life of a Russian soldier is desperately hard, and owing to the compulsory service law there are all sorts of attempts made by the simple-minded peasant to avoid the quicker-witted recruiting officer. At a station in Eastern Russia, for instance, a conscript recently pleaded deafness and so wouldn't answer any of the questions put to him.

You can go home, said the surgeon at last, in a very low tone.

The fellow jumped for the door and so was caught.

Near Moscow a Hercules said that the index and middle fingers of his right hand were joined together and could not be separated. They didn't look it, but the surgeon's strength was not great enough to separate them, and at last the examiner said:

How were your fingers before you had this accident?

They were this way, said Hercules, and to the surprise of every one, he illustrated by opening his fingers as easily as anybody else.

Republican's Birthplace.

There has been much controversy as to the birthplace of the Republican party, but the claims of Michigan seem sufficiently well established for all the ordinary purposes of history. While the Whigs and Free-Soil Democrats in other states were discussing the formation of a new party 10,000 opponents of the extension of slavery met in a mass convention at Jackson, July 6, 1854. The convention was managed by Senator Jacob M. Howard and by Zachariah Chandler, who was destined soon to become one of the commanding figures in the movement. The convention nominated a full State ticket and adopted the name "Republican." Similar conventions were held in Wisconsin and Vermont on July 13 of that year, and in Massachusetts on July 19. The Michigan Republicans were the first, however, to nominate a ticket and adopt the party name.—New York World.

The Beginning of Tammany Society.

Tammany society was formed in New York in 1789, chiefly through the efforts of William Mooney, an upholsterer in New York City. Its first grand sachein, to oppose the federalists. It has ever since been an important political body, largely controlling for many years the local New York City government, and in state and national politics professing to adhere to the democratic party. The name "Tammany" is said by tradition to have been taken from an aged, wise and friendly Delaware chief, chosen for his virtues as the patron saint of the new republic. The first meeting of the society was held May 12, 1789. The act of incorporation was passed in 1805. The grand sachein and the 13 sacheins represent the President of the United States and the 13 original governors.
